In this session, participants will go through a clinical case using a typical US 'morning report'-style. The case will assess students on the following skills:

- (1) formulating a practical differential diagnosis that guides clinical care
- (2) asking the appropriate clinical questions about symptoms, risk factors, and history based on presenting conditions and differential diagnoses
- (3) utilizing appropriate physical exam and diagnostic skills in order to best rule out life-threatening diseases, while ruling in more likely diagnoses.

The conference will be interactive, with participants working in teams to solve the case. The presenter will facilitate audience participation, and augment discussion with practical teaching points.
